

ABSTRACT

A high density, high speed semiconductor module including a plurality of active semiconductor chip pairs bonded face-to-face. A functional system within the footprint of a single-chip package is provided by vertically stacking flip-chip pairs and interconnecting the chip pairs on a substrate or package. Assembly of the device including various combinations of more than one chip pair, in combination with individual chips, advantageously utilizes known manufacturing technology and equipment.